

Bue the Warrior (Belgium) / Show in Graffitigalleriet 3 December - 23 December 2009

Bue has been drawing forever. He comes from a family of draughtsmen, his father and grandfather drawing for one of the most popular comic strip studios in Belgium (Studio Vandersteen, authors of Willy and Wanda).

"I started painting an evening back in 1991, when I met two spray can artists on a bus, on their way to paint walls (Desk and Phase). They told me that since I had drawing skills, I should be trying out spray painting, and they handed me two of their cans, so I could start something. The same evening I painted my first piece, and was hooked on it ever since."

He tries to put as much colour and positive energy in his paintings as possible, living in a country where it's mostly rainy and concrete built. He finds his satisfaction from putting smiles on people's faces, or gives them a heart-warming feeling. (f.e. "HeyHey the Bear", who lives to greet people).

He travels as often as he can to leave his mark everywhere he has been, as in Germany, Italy, Spain, the Netherlands, France, Mexico and the U.S. (New York, Los Angeles).

He also collaborates with artists from around the world, adapting his style to others to create coherent pieces rather than a sum of artists' works.

Preview: Thursday 3 December / 5.00 – 9.00 p.m.
